Hi Heather,

Based on last year, we held a Christmas fair in the community centre from 12 to 4pm with various craft stalls, children's activities, visits with Father Christmas, and reindeer outside. I don't know whether the band would prefer to do one longer performance, perhaps starting at 4pm to provide the grand finale of the event, or a series of shorter slots over the course of the afternoon. Have a think and let me know what you think would work better. Either way, obviously, carols and Christmas tunes!

Hi Rebecca

We have had quite a few requests come in from various people. We would love to do the OAP events, however as it's daytime most of us are working. So it's probably best we say no for that. Evening events and weekends shouldn't be a problem as most of us aren't working then. The sooner you are able to provide dates the better so we can make sure we have enough people. We have booked our Christmas concert at the rugby club for 27th November. Hope to hear back with some dates as soon as you can as we really want to be involved.

Thanks

Heather

Dear Heather,

We have been encouraged to ask if the brass band would be available to provide some carols or similar festive entertainment at one or more of our Christmas events.

The Over 60s' lunches at the rugby club are held approx. 12-4pm on Wednesday 16th and Thursday 17th December.

There will probably also be a Christmas fair one weekend in December, but we do not yet have a date for that - what is the band's availability at this stage?

Looking forward to hearing from you.

As per the attached note, Section 50 of the Food Act 1984 allows a council to establish or purchase a market in their district and thus become a market authority which "may demand... such charges as they may from time to time determine" (s53.1).

- As long as it does not infringe the rights of any existing local markets
- As long as there is nothing in the covenant or lease of the building to preclude it

Charges must be displayed on the premises (s53.3a)

Charges must be paid to an authorised market officer (s54.1)

The authority may make byelaws for regulating the market (s60)

Subject: Charging pitch fees for a regular market in a community centre

Dear Paul,

Please could you advise regarding the following.

We are considering holding a regular monthly market in our community centre hall. We do not have GPOC and would like to know whether there is a legal mechanism for charging the stallholders a pitch fee, and what such a fee could be used for.

Many thanks for your guidance.

Markets and other events

This advice note was written by our in-house solicitors and last updated on 1 March 2017.

The information and commentary in the note do not constitute legal advice for any individual case or matter. For specific advice on your circumstances, we strongly encourage you to seek tailored legal advice.

Markets

Local councils (but not parish or community meetings) can establish or acquire markets in their area under section 50 of the Food Act 1984 (1984 Act) (becoming “market authorities”). The general power to provide a market is, however, subject to one important exception set out in section 50(2) of the 1984 Act: A market shall not be established in pursuance of this section so as to interfere with any rights, powers or privileges enjoyed within the authority’s area in respect of a market by any person, without that person’s consent.

These “rights, powers or privileges” are rights persons may have under ancient laws concerning markets and tolls. According to common law, a person who has a right to hold a market may have an exclusive right to do so within a distance of 7 miles. This ancient common law right was confirmed by the House of Lords in R (on the application of Corporation of London) v Secretary of State for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and Others [2006] UKHL 30 in respect of a dispute between the owners of the Covent Garden, Smithfield and Billingsgate markets. Similarly, in Leeds City Council v Watkins [2003] EWHC 598 (Ch), the council was able to rely on these ancient laws to prevent car boot sales from operating near their own markets.

A local council considering establishing a new market would need to consider whether the new market would be within seven miles of other markets in the area. The common law is practically set in stone at this point, and the prospects of a change seem to be highly remote. If in doubt, councils should seek further advice.

Associated facilities:

Under s. 50(1) of the 1984 Act a local council can provide a market place with convenient approaches to it and/or a market house and other buildings convenient for the holding of a market.

Miscellaneous matters:

The 1984 Act also gives a market authority a number of other powers, including:

To charge fees for the use of the market (s. 53).

To recover unpaid fees (s. 55).

To provide a cold air store or refrigerator for the storage and preservation of meat and other articles of food (s. 53(2)).

To make byelaws in respect of markets (s. 60) for:

Regulating the use of the marketplace, and the buildings, stalls, pens and standings in the marketplace.

Preventing nuisances or obstructions in the marketplace or in the immediate approaches to it.

Regulating porters and carriers at the market and fixing the charges to be made for carrying articles from the market within the district.

Preventing the spread of fires in the market (after consulting the fire and rescue authority for the area in which the market is situated).

Further Information:

It would not be possible, within the scope of this advice note, to set out all of the legal considerations that could apply to the many different types of markets, but councils wishing to become involved with farmers markets may wish to visit the Food Standards Agency website.

Fetes, agricultural, horticultural and other shows

Under section 44 of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act 1890, a local council may close to the public the whole or part of any park or pleasure ground provided by them and may use it for or allow any public charity or institution to use it for:

An agricultural or horticultural show.

Any other type of show.

Any other public purpose.

Clearly, the wording of the section is quite broad and would cover fetes, festivals and carnivals. Entry to the events may be free of charge or by payment.

The grounds may be closed on any day the council sees fit, but the closures must not:

Exceed twelve days in any one year.

Exceed four consecutive days on any one occasion.

Include a Sunday.

Section 145 of the Local Government Act 1972 (1972 Act) supplements this power by enabling a local council to do, arrange for, or contribute towards the expenses of, anything (whether inside or outside their area) “necessary or expedient” for:

Providing entertainment of any nature or facilities for dancing.

Providing a theatre, concert hall, dance hall or other premises suitable for entertainment or dances.

Maintaining a band or orchestra.

The development and improvement of the knowledge, understanding and practice of the arts and the crafts which serve the arts.

Any incidental purpose, including the provision of refreshments or programmes and the advertising of any entertainment, dance or exhibition of arts or crafts held by them.

A local council may also:

Enclose or set apart any part of a park or pleasure ground belonging to the authority or under their control.

Permit any theatre, concert hall, dance hall or other premises provided by them or any part of a park or pleasure ground enclosed or set apart to be used by any other person, on such terms as to payment or otherwise as the authority thinks fit, and may authorise that other person to make charges for admission thereto.

Itself makes charges for admission to any entertainment given or dance or exhibition of arts or crafts held by them and for any refreshment or programmes supplied.

However, the section. 145 of the 1972 Act does not authorise a council to contravene any covenant or condition attached to the land without the consent of the person entitled to the benefit of the covenant or condition.

Further, none of the powers set out above free councils from the need to obtain licences in respect of some activities.

LTN Markets and other events.docx;

As per the attached note, Section 50 of the Food Act 1984 allows a council to establish or purchase a market in their district and thus become a market authority which "may demand... such charges as they may from time to time determine" (s53.1).

- As long as it does not infringe the rights of any existing local markets
- As long as there is nothing in the covenant or lease of the building to preclude it

Charges must be displayed on the premises (s53.3a)

Charges must be paid to an authorised market officer (s54.1)

The authority may make byelaws for regulating the market (s60)

"Charges" includes stallage or tolls (s61)

Subject: Charging pitch fees for a regular market in a community centre

Dear Paul,

Please could you advise regarding the following.

We are considering holding a regular monthly market in our community centre hall. We do not have GPOC and would like to know whether there is a legal mechanism for charging the stallholders a pitch fee, and what such a fee could be used for.

Many thanks for your guidance.

Markets and other events

This advice note was written by our in-house solicitors and last updated on 1 March 2017.

The information and commentary in the note do not constitute legal advice for any individual case or matter. For specific advice on your circumstances, we strongly encourage you to seek tailored legal advice.

Markets

Local councils (but not parish or community meetings) can establish or acquire markets in their area under section 50 of the Food Act 1984 (1984 Act) (becoming “market authorities”). The general power to provide a market is, however, subject to one important exception set out in section 50(2) of the 1984 Act: A market shall not be established in pursuance of this section so as to interfere with any rights, powers or privileges enjoyed within the authority’s area in respect of a market by any person, without that person’s consent.

These “rights, powers or privileges” are rights persons may have under ancient laws concerning markets and tolls. According to common law, a person who has a right to hold a market may have an exclusive right to do so within a distance of 7 miles. This ancient common law right was confirmed by the House of Lords in R (on the application of Corporation of London) v Secretary of State for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and Others [2006] UKHL 30 in respect of a dispute between the owners of the Covent Garden, Smithfield and Billingsgate markets. Similarly, in Leeds City Council v Watkins [2003] EWHC 598 (Ch), the council was able to rely on these ancient laws to prevent car boot sales from operating near their own markets.

A local council considering establishing a new market would need to consider whether the new market would be within seven miles of other markets in the area. The common law is practically set in stone at this point, and the prospects of a change seem to be highly remote. If in doubt, councils should seek further advice.

Associated facilities:

Under s. 50(1) of the 1984 Act a local council can provide a market place with convenient approaches to it and/or a market house and other buildings convenient for the holding of a market.

Miscellaneous matters:

The 1984 Act also gives a market authority a number of other powers, including:

To charge fees for the use of the market (s. 53).

To recover unpaid fees (s. 55).

To provide a cold air store or refrigerator for the storage and preservation of meat and other articles of food (s. 53(2)).

To make byelaws in respect of markets (s. 60) for:

Regulating the use of the marketplace, and the buildings, stalls, pens and standings in the marketplace.

Preventing nuisances or obstructions in the marketplace or in the immediate approaches to it.

Regulating porters and carriers at the market and fixing the charges to be made for carrying articles from the market within the district.

Preventing the spread of fires in the market (after consulting the fire and rescue authority for the area in which the market is situated).

Further Information:

It would not be possible, within the scope of this advice note, to set out all of the legal considerations that could apply to the many different types of markets, but councils wishing to become involved with farmers markets may wish to visit the Food Standards Agency website.

Fetes, agricultural, horticultural and other shows

Under section 44 of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act 1890, a local council may close to the public the whole or part of any park or pleasure ground provided by them and may use it for or allow any public charity or institution to use it for:

An agricultural or horticultural show.

Any other type of show.

Any other public purpose.

Clearly, the wording of the section is quite broad and would cover fetes, festivals and carnivals. Entry to the events may be free of charge or by payment.

The grounds may be closed on any day the council sees fit, but the closures must not:

Exceed twelve days in any one year.

Exceed four consecutive days on any one occasion.

Include a Sunday.

Section 145 of the Local Government Act 1972 (1972 Act) supplements this power by enabling a local council to do, arrange for, or contribute towards the expenses of, anything (whether inside or outside their area) “necessary or expedient” for:

Providing entertainment of any nature or facilities for dancing.

Providing a theatre, concert hall, dance hall or other premises suitable for entertainment or dances.

Maintaining a band or orchestra.

The development and improvement of the knowledge, understanding and practice of the arts and the crafts which serve the arts.

Any incidental purpose, including the provision of refreshments or programmes and the advertising of any entertainment, dance or exhibition of arts or crafts held by them.

A local council may also:

Enclose or set apart any part of a park or pleasure ground belonging to the authority or under their control.

Permit any theatre, concert hall, dance hall or other premises provided by them or any part of a park or pleasure ground enclosed or set apart to be used by any other person, on such terms as to payment or otherwise as the authority thinks fit, and may authorise that other person to make charges for admission thereto.

Itself makes charges for admission to any entertainment given or dance or exhibition of arts or crafts held by them and for any refreshment or programmes supplied.

However, the section. 145 of the 1972 Act does not authorise a council to contravene any covenant or condition attached to the land without the consent of the person entitled to the benefit of the covenant or condition.

Further, none of the powers set out above free councils from the need to obtain licences in respect of some activities.
